

Very Short Stories for a Very Long Life (Cat Cages and Suitcase & Stealing from the Vatican Book 1)

These short stories were written for anyone who can step back for a few moments, not take life so seriously, have an open mind, and love to laugh; can you do that? If you have known people, or are people, who live, or have lived their lives reacting to their emotions, you might even recognize yourself in these pages. The people, places and location may be different, but the subject matter will relate. Most of us not only wake and sleep in dysfunctional families but in a dysfunctional world. These stories will open up your mind to a lifestyle most would find very difficult to believe ever happened, but it did. As you turn these pages you will begin to take a walk on the wild side while never leaving your chair. I wrote these stories so others can sit back relax and even laugh while they say, Are you kidding me? These stories span an almost 70 year period. The subject matter is based on real life experiences. Over the past 45 years I have made several attempts at putting together memories at the request of friends and family but never seemed to have taken the time to complete anything. Now is that time. The one person who continued to encourage my writing was my step mother who passed in 1997. She was the principal and teacher of a one room country school house in Oklahoma. Her students all graduated and went to college, but she had a wooden paddle, and she used it. She hid some of the notes I had written over the years because one of my several husbands would always burn or tear up anything he found, including me. One of my attorneys once told me I should have these experiences written as a soap opera, it would be on television for decades. Well, how about a mini-series? First I began writing as if it would be one book, but things were happening around my life so quickly that I knew it would just be confusing and somewhat boring. The idea for short stories came to me a few months back. A friend recommended a book to me written in the short story format about experiences in the authors life. I immediately knew this would be the way I could express myself without completely getting everyone confused. There are some very serious life issues within these pages, from money laundering, attempted murder, unconditional love, fatal attractions, bigamy, bank robberies, physical and mental illness, witness protection, outstanding practical jokes, alcohol and drug addiction all occurring during decades of war, fighting for civil rights, assassinations, hurricanes, earthquakes, erupting volcanoes, riots and Woodstock. Just the titles of the stories should make you want to begin reading right now. Today I am spending my days walking, traveling, doing Yoga and loving breathing one breath at a time. I have never allowed anyone or anything to break my spirit and Ive left no dead bodies. Many of the names have been changed, but some asked that I use their real name; so if you see yourself in some of the stories, deal with it! You know it happened! There are many lessons learned but no regrets. I lived the life, walked the walk and talked the talk. It took me a long time before I knew I had choices or that I was my biggest limitation. Today I will only say that if I had it to do over again Id just do more of it! Someone stated that they didnt want to know what degrees you have earned from universities and colleges, they only wanted to know about the places you have traveled. Me, I just want to know who youve slept with! To be continued..
