How do you even begin describing the rollercoaster ride of making a feature film? Making a film can overwhelm you with insecurity and anxiety; this is never more accurate than when you are making your first film. One Night to get it right: the making of an Independent film, was written from the experiences making the feature film One Night. This book focuses on how to make something from nothing, while taking the mystery out of creating a film. Filled with mistakes to avoid, helpful tips, and observations covering pre to post production; there are also sections on finding a story, the audition process, and what to do when the film is done. Loaded with almost 100 photos, along with the full screenplay and scene-by-scene screenshots, this book is the travel guide for the unpredictable world of no-budget feature filmmaking.
