So saying, he flung the coffer on his shoulders with ease, and went down stairs with it upon tip-toes. I followed him with some caution, and we were just going out at the street-door, when Don Abel, brought thither so seasonably by his good genius, appeared all of a sudden. Where art thou going with the coffer? (said he.) I was so confounded, that I stood silent; and the bravo seeing the affair misgive, threw down his load, and betook himself to flight, in order to avoid explanations. Where art thou going with the coffer? (said my master for the second time.) Sir, (answered I, more dead than alive,) I am going to carry it on board the ship in which you are to embark to-morrow for Italy. Ha! (be replied,) dost thou know in what ship I intended to sail? No, Sir, (said I,) but I have a tongue in my head, and I should have enquired at the harbour, where somebody would have certainly told me. At this my answer, which he suspected, he darted such a furious look at me, that I was afraid of a second beating. Who ordered you (cried he) to bring my coffer out of the house? You yourself (said I.) Dont you remember how you upbraided me some days ago? Did not you say while you beat me, that you expected I would prevent your orders, and do what was proper for your service of my own accord? Now, it was in consequence of this direction, that I employed one to carry your coffer to the ship. The gamester observing that I was more mischievous than he imagined, dismissed me immediately, saying, with an air of indifference, Go, Mr. Scipio, and heaven be your guide. I dant choose to ...
