

No Place Like Home

Read a delightful, whimsical action comedy screenplay from award-winning screenwriter and long-time screenwriting professor JAMES DESMARAIS, written with his writing partner and wife, sit-com and tv movie writer ALISON ROSENFELD DESMARAIS. Their writing credits include VICTOM OF LOVE (starring PIERCE BROSNAN, JOBETH WILLIAMS and VIRGINIA MADSEN), URBAN SAFARI (starring DAVID NAUGHTON, LINDA KASH and BARRY PEPPER), GHOST RIDERS and the long running sit-com NIGHT COURT. They have developed projects with Don Johnson, MGM, ABC Productions and the Hearst Corporation, among many others. Jim Desmarais has taught screenwriting and directing for over 25 years, at a variety of Los Angeles colleges, including UCLA and Los Angeles City College. Long ago, when Dorothy attempted her escape from Oz in that hot air balloon, no one realized that hidden away in a wicker basket was a Munchkin named MORTY, looking for a life of adventure. Now, in present day Los Angeles, the witch you didnt hear about - RISA - is looking for Morty. She wants something better than the Ruby Slippers - she wants his Magic Belt, for in that belt lies the power to destroy Oz forever. Meanwhile, all Morty wants is to go home. Mortys been protected for years by SUSAN, whom he met after shed separated from her writer husband DAN. Still loving Dan, shes shocked to learn he actually wants to finalize a divorce. Spurred by that disappointment, along with the growing threat to Morty, Susan decides to leave town, even though it will mean a separation from 12-year-old NATALIE, Dans daughter, Susans step-daughter. But before she can get her plans together, Risa finds her and puts a spell on her. To the outside world, Susan appears dead. Not knowing what else to do, Morty approaches Dan for help. But Dans way too cynical to believe in Munchkins - he thinks Morty is a product of a night of drinking. So Morty turns to Natalie. And after a little Magic Belt action, Natalie has no choice but to believe. Together, she and Morty manage to kidnap the not-really-dead Susan from the morgue and stash her in the basement of Dan and Natalie's house. But now they face a real challenge - Risa's hot on Morty's trail - she really wants that belt. And when Natalie gets no help from her father, she's got to get Morty out of town. Natalie is one clever kid, and she and Morty take to the highway, all the while taking the not-really-dead Susan wherever they go. The trio is gone by the time Risa shows her true colors to Dan. He quickly becomes a believer in both witches and Munchkins. And when he inadvertently reveals Natalie, Susan and Morty's whereabouts to Risa, he's got to find them before the witch does. It's a race - and Risa manages to get Morty and Susan into her clutches - quite literally. Now it's up to Natalie and Dan to rescue them before Risa can kill Morty and make Susan's spell permanent. Dan and Natalie have to work together - and they do. Everyone knows you kill a witch by dropping a house on her. Once she's gone, her evil spells are broken, and Susan is back. Of course, Morty still wants to go home, but it seems the Magic Belt has run out of magic. However, some things don't change. And if you really believe there's no place like home, you can work wonders.
