

Coffin Humor: A Short Story

Noah awoke in a casket. The casket was on display in a funeral parlor. He awoke several times more in the same casket and each time had a conversation with the funeral services practitioner, a strange man named Jeremy Black. During these exchanges, he became aware that his memory was seriously impaired. Each time, however, he learned a little bit more about his past through a reliving of the last desperate few days. He also learned that the recovery of his memory would lead to his death. Problem was: It might already be too late.
