

I Married a Journalist (Part 1)

I have long felt that the three books my parents wrote together in the nineteen-sixties, Long March To Freedom, The Timely Rain and Memories for a Chinese Grand-daughter stand as a memorial to them. It now seems appropriate that my mothers Memoir should join them, to be handed down to her beloved grandchildren and their descendants. I think it will convey to them not only some interesting family history but also something of the important right values and memorable personalities of their ancestors.
