

The Spirit of Italy: Impressions and Observations of an American Newspaper Man During the Early Months of the War Against Austria (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Spirit of Italy: Impressions and Observations of an American Newspaper Man During the Early Months of the War Against Austria. This book is composed of a series of letters written during the first three months after Italy's declaration of war against Austria. Nearly all of them have been printed in the New York Evening Sun, among the exceptions being the letter relating to Louis Latapie's much-discussed interview with Pope Benedict XV. The letters are cursory and make pretension neither to style or profundity. However, quite a number of Italian friends and Americans, with a tender feeling for Italy, suggested that I collect them in a more permanent form. They seemed to think that they threw some light on general conditions in Italy at the outbreak of the war, and in a measure voiced the spirit of the Italian people, to whom the world owes so much, in these tragic hours.
