

Terrys Cat Tails! 45

Cats are amazing little critters. Im a cat lover and I started writing about cat-antics last summer when our twenty-year-old kitty passed away. His name was Feely. He got his name because he was blind and felt his way through life. Everyone had fun with him in one way or another. My teenage boys loved to entice him to jump on the couch and then laughed themselves silly when he would over-shoot the height and nose-dive into the cushions. Feely loved that play time as much as the kids did and he expressed it with a constant purr. Cat Tails 45 includes 45 true short stories about the lives of my cat, Ditto, and an ongoing string of feral cats that live in the trees behind my home...some of which have now become inside pets. Rather than try to explain the humorous activities of these little animals and to give you a sample of my writing style, Im going to post Cat Tail 44. My website is www.terryscattails.com. Check it out for more stories and see photos of the kittys! Cat Tail 44 It rained here in Cherokee this morning. In fact, its been raining off and on all day. Thats really good news because we need it bad. So, anyway, when it rains, theres mud. When cats go outside, they walk in the mud. When they come back inside, my carpet or my spread-out towels remove the mud from their cute little paws. My inside cats, Ditto and Chubby, get grounded when it rains so theyve been inside all day because its rained off and on all day, as I said. You would know that if you were paying attention. Anyway, they seem to have agreed to a truce and there hasnt been an outburst since I wrote Cat Tail 42. They seem to have agreed to separate territories, such as positions on my big chair. Chubby lies beside me on the right and Ditto either takes my lap or the leather armrest on the right side...above Chubby, of course. They like their sleep and they both disappeared for most of the day. They showed up about an hour ago, about three in the afternoon. Chubby went to his territory by my side and Ditto took the armrest. They took cat-naps which was amazing since they had slept all day. All was well as I watched Alien Mysteries on my big screen. Just as I really got into it, Ditto woke up and stretched. Chubby was contently sleeping right below him. His stretch suddenly morphed into an arched back attack. His tail bushed out and leaped straight up. I'm not kidding about two feet in the air and came down on sleeping Chubby. Well, all hell broke loose. Chubby sprang to life and physically threw Ditto at the ottoman. Seriously, it was like a WWE wrestling move, Emmett would have loved it! I didn't feel sorry for him because he started the fight but it was a little sad to watch him bounce off his own ottoman and fall to his own floor. What the hell! I shouted as I stood up. Knock that off you guys! They both looked at me as if to say, Buzz off, human. Don't tell ME to buzz off, I have the food around here. I reminded them. They were both motionless for a moment, then in the blink of an eye they shot through the house and out the cat door, Chubby being chased by Ditto. They're back now and all is peaceful. Ditto is on the window ledge and Chubby is in his place beside me sleeping soundly again. This little event is one of the reasons I love cats. They dream. They run and play and fight and even meow in their dreams. Ditto obviously had a dream that a strange cat managed to get in the house and invade Chubby's territory. When he awoke he saw the intruder and went into action. I would bet Chubby knows Ditto had a bad dream and that's why no fur flew this time. I would also bet he came very close to crapping on my big chair like he did in my vanway back in Cat Tail 24..
