

The Miser

The Miser, by Moliere is a classic comedy of French theatre. This edition was adapted by Rolf McEwen. Harpagon is aging and terribly cranky. He is hoarding every cent he can, making sure that his children, Elise and Cleante, live under his oppressive control. Harpagon's daughter Elise has fallen in love with a handsome young fellow, Valere, who pretends to be a servant in the household, despite his noble birth. In a peculiar and unlikely circumstance, both Cleante and Harpagon are pursuing the same woman, the beautiful Marianne. Meanwhile, servants and others are attempting to confiscate Harpagon's money, much of which is buried. The convoluted plot eventually leads to a hilarious and pleasing conclusion.
