I cant help it, Clif; Im sorry, but I cant help it! NOYES. Good Gawd, man, dont you know thats the only reason we elected you? You don think you got in on yo good looks, do you? Oh, come off, you cant tun coat this way, even if yo fool enough to want to. Its--its ridiculous--yes, thats the wod--its dam ridiculous! He tries to laugh. Phil. All right, then. But Ill do it jus the same. Noyes. Breathing hard. Dyou really mean that, Phil? Phil. Yes, I mean it. Noyes. Close to him and speaking very quietly. I reckon you wouldnt like it, Phil, if I was t call you a dity coward? Phil. I reckon, Clif, youd bettah not try! There is again the noise of distant firing. Noyes. But thats what I call a man who climbs ovah his friens into a big position--an then kicks em away from undah his feet--Phil. Look out now! Noyes. His voice rising. A man who goes back on his wod that way--by God, I call him a dam, lyin--Phil. Blazing up at him. Stop that or Ill throw you out of the house! You know as well as me I nevah promised you or Watson a dam thing! I made that pufectly cleah when I accepted the nomination--that I felt free to act in every way exactly as I pleased! So if yo caught now, its yo own fault an you can take every ounce o blame! NOYES. You undestood why we ran you into office--theahs no use denyin it! You meant money in our pockets--come now, you cant go back on us like that! Well make you--Phil. Interrupting. If you expected me to use the govenment o this State fo the protection of yo whiskey business, you got hold the wrong man--an thats all! Noyes. We elected you on yo name an paty loyal...
