Excerpt: ... THE POET AT THE BREAKFAST-TABLE i The idea of a mans interviewing himself is rather odd, to be sure. But then that is what we are all of us doing every day. I talk half the time to find out my own thoughts, as a school-boy turns his pockets inside out to see what is in them. He brings to light all sorts of personal property he had forgotten in his inventory.--You dont know what your thoughts are going to be beforehand? said the Member of the Haouse, as he calls himself.--Why, of course I dont. Bless your honest legislative soul, I suppose I have as many bound volumes of notions of one kind and another in my head as you have in your Representatives library up there at the State House. I have to tumble them over and over and open them in a hundred places, and sometimes cut the leaves here and there, to find what I think about this and that. And a good many people who flatter themselves they are talking wisdom to me, are only helping me to get at the shelf and the book and the page where I shall find my own opinion about the matter in question.--The Members eyes began to look heavy.--Its a very queer place, that receptacle a man fetches his talk out of. The library comparison doesnt exactly hit it. You stow away some idea and dont A want it, say for ten years. When it turns up at last it has got so jammed and crushed out of shape by the other ideas packed with it, that it is no more like what it was than a raisin is like a grape on the vine, or a fig from a drum like one hanging on the tree. Then, again, some kinds of thoughts breed in the dark of ones mind like the blind fishes in the Mammoth Cave. We cant see them and they cant see us; but sooner or later the daylight gets in and we find that some cold, fishy little negative has been spawn...
