

Irving Waxey Gordon Wexler

Waxey Gordon moved into Elmira, New York and Paterson, New Jersey around 1929, muscling his way, and eliminating rivals who stood in his way. Similar to Al Capone in Chicago, Gordon was tried for income tax evasion. It took federal prosecutors two and half years to gather enough documents to put him on trial in a New York City courtroom. In the early 1930s Waxey had profited from the elimination of Mad Dog Coll and Jack Legs Diamond, who were assassinated. Gordons beer empire extended throughout upstate New York, into Pennsylvania, and also several counties of New Jersey. His racketeering operations went as far as St. Louis and Chicago in the midwest. A hoodlum from youth, Waxey was raised in a New York City tenement, and was active in a gang on Manhattans East Side.
